Presidential Address To The Class of 1999

Plattsburgh
STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK

OFFICE OF
THE PRESIDENT

Plattsburgh, NY
(2001-268)
Tel. (518) 564-2010

Congratulations to the graduating class of 1999!

Like you and your loved ones, I am very proud of your academic and professional accomplishments. You have affirmed your intellectual prowess at one of the finest institutions within the State University of New York, the largest and best system of higher education in the country. We are told by former alumni that you are readily equipped for the next phase of your life, whether it be in the professions, graduate school, or other intellectual ventures.

As a Plattsburgh State University graduate, I'm sure you share our pride and pleasure at the achievements of your classmates and alma mater. We are a stronger institution because of the extraordinary support of our alumni. Almost every past and present student, faculty, and staff member embraces a commitment to the education of future generations of Plattsburgh State students, and I am sure your class will be no different.

Plattsburgh State University is a very special college. The relationships you have developed, the growth you have experienced, and the knowledge that you have mastered has prepared you well for a diversity of avenues. I am quite confident that each of you will make your mark in this world. I have had the pleasure of interacting with many of you this past year and have found that you are enterprising, congenial, energetic, and inspiring. As you take further steps toward new heights, embrace change with confidence and challenge perceived limitations.

This is truly an exciting time for us. The institution is on the edge of a new millennium that will ask us to advance campus technology, think differently about teaching and learning for the professions, and respond to an increasingly global society. The world of professional work is also changing. And I, as well as the faculty and staff, eagerly await hearing of your next triumphant adventure.

I wish you the very best of luck, continued growth and much success!

Keep in touch.

OMICRON DELTA KAPPA

Omicron Delta Kappa is a national leadership honor society for college men and women. It was founded at Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Virginia, on December 3, 1914. ODK was the first honor society of national scope to give recognition and honor for meritorious leadership and service in extracurricular activities, to promote outstanding scholarship and to encourage the development of general campus citizenship. Today there are active circles of this organization on 261 college and university campuses throughout the United States.

Membership in Omicron Delta Kappa is awarded primarily to junior and senior students, but graduate students may also be extended membership. A unique aspect of ODK is that faculty and staff members may also be invited into membership. Exemplary character, responsible leadership and service in campus and community life, and outstanding scholarship are indispensable qualifications for membership. ODK became a reality on this campus on May 2, 1981, with more than 1260 faculty, staff and students being honored by membership in the society since that time. Plattsburgh is one of only seven colleges in the State of New York to be granted an ODK charter and the first campus within SUNY.

The Wrigley Feud

I search the library for an empty table,
 Students take up every seat,
 But finally I find the last vacant nook.
 I open my book and begin to read
 A boring chapter on Scotland.
 Then snap!
 The girl at the table behind me devours her gum.
 I try to read about Robert the Bruce battling with England.
 The next line more difficult-Snap!
 I read how Robert the Bruce never gave up.
 Snap! Pop! Snap!
 I wrap my arms around my waist
 Like my own strait jacket.
 The walls suffocate me.
 I have to get out of the padded cell.
 I go outside for a cigarette
 And downstairs for a pack of chewing gum.
 "I will fight snap for snap," I think aloud.

I return to my seat.
 The girl's head reposes on the table-
 Her eyes closed.
 Maybe she died-
 Choked on the sticky mass of rubber.
 Asleep or dead,
 I can study.
 I read and chew through three lines.
 Snap! That noise comes from me.
 Up springs the girl's head.
 I rouse the sleeping dragon.
 The Wrigley feud commences.
 Cinnamon versus peppermint.
 Soon all the students are chewing.
 Blowing bubbles, and snapping.
 When one battle ends,
 Another starts.
 The studying ceases.
 That's when I snap!

Miles

They separate us.
They make you a secret to me.
Distance not only of land, but of age and intelligence.
Not fully knowing you, and you not me.
We play with life, the future.
Seemingly undisturbing, yet deeply affecting.
Time passes between us at different rates.
What's new for you is old for me.
When I am dead you will live on.
The distance between us small to the eye, yet far to the soul.
You will forget me as the miles grow, I'll leave few traces.
I will be just a blurred face in a crowd of millions.
Never will I mean to you as you do to me.
We will meet again, in different bodies, another time.
We will cover different miles, you and I.
Together, and alone.

Pondering a Muse

Have you seen the breeze yet,
today, my child?

Has the sun beat it's path
in an atomic rage for you this week?

Why should we die,
why should we live?

What brought the cosmic dust together and created such an eccentric universe?

Why should we listen,
why should we care?

Have you seen the blood stains,
the fetid entrails of humanity?

Has the mighty raging sea
--ever flowing, ever ebbing--stopped at your word?

How could we live,
how could we die?

What, we ask, is the answer to the question we have never heard?

THE LAST LEAF OF AUTUMN

"I can't do it," she thought. She sat in her 1987 Honda Civic for over an hour. She tried to force herself to get out of the car. She lit a cigarette. White currents of smoke drifted from her nostrils. Brown leaves darted around the parking lot. She wished she was one of them. She inhaled the smoke and tried to convince herself to open the car door.

She turned the car radio on instead. A love song blared out. A song about two lost lovers made her cry. She looked down at the clutter on the passenger seat. She found a newspaper clipping in the pile of McDonald's napkins, toll tickets, and maps. She ripped the obituary into little shreds, threw it out the window, and watched the pieces of print fall to the ground. They landed next to an oak tree whose branches were bare.

She slammed her fists on the steering wheel and shook her fist at the sky. A large gust of wind blew a pile of crusted leaves onto the windshield and she angrily turned the wipers on and watched the rubber blade strike the leaves. They drifted to the ground in silent single file.

She looked at her eyes imprisoned by the oblong rearview mirror and wiped the smeared mascara from beneath her eyelash. A dried leaf landed on the windshield. She turned the wipers on and they crashed into the leaf sending it flying onto the car's hood.

She looked up and saw a figure in black walking toward her. She looked at the brown suitcase on the back seat. It was the one that her grandmother had given her when she went away to college. That was years ago and she'd barely used the suitcase since. She wished that she would have used it more often. But work was more important than packing the old suitcase and coming home. Her friends and dating took precedence over home visits. If only she had given up one date or called in sick one day and used that old retired suitcase. "Give me one more chance," she said. But there was no reply. A piece of her pink flannel pajama hung out of the suitcase. She opened it and pushed in the material. The suitcase was in great disarray. It was stuffed with photo albums and clothes.

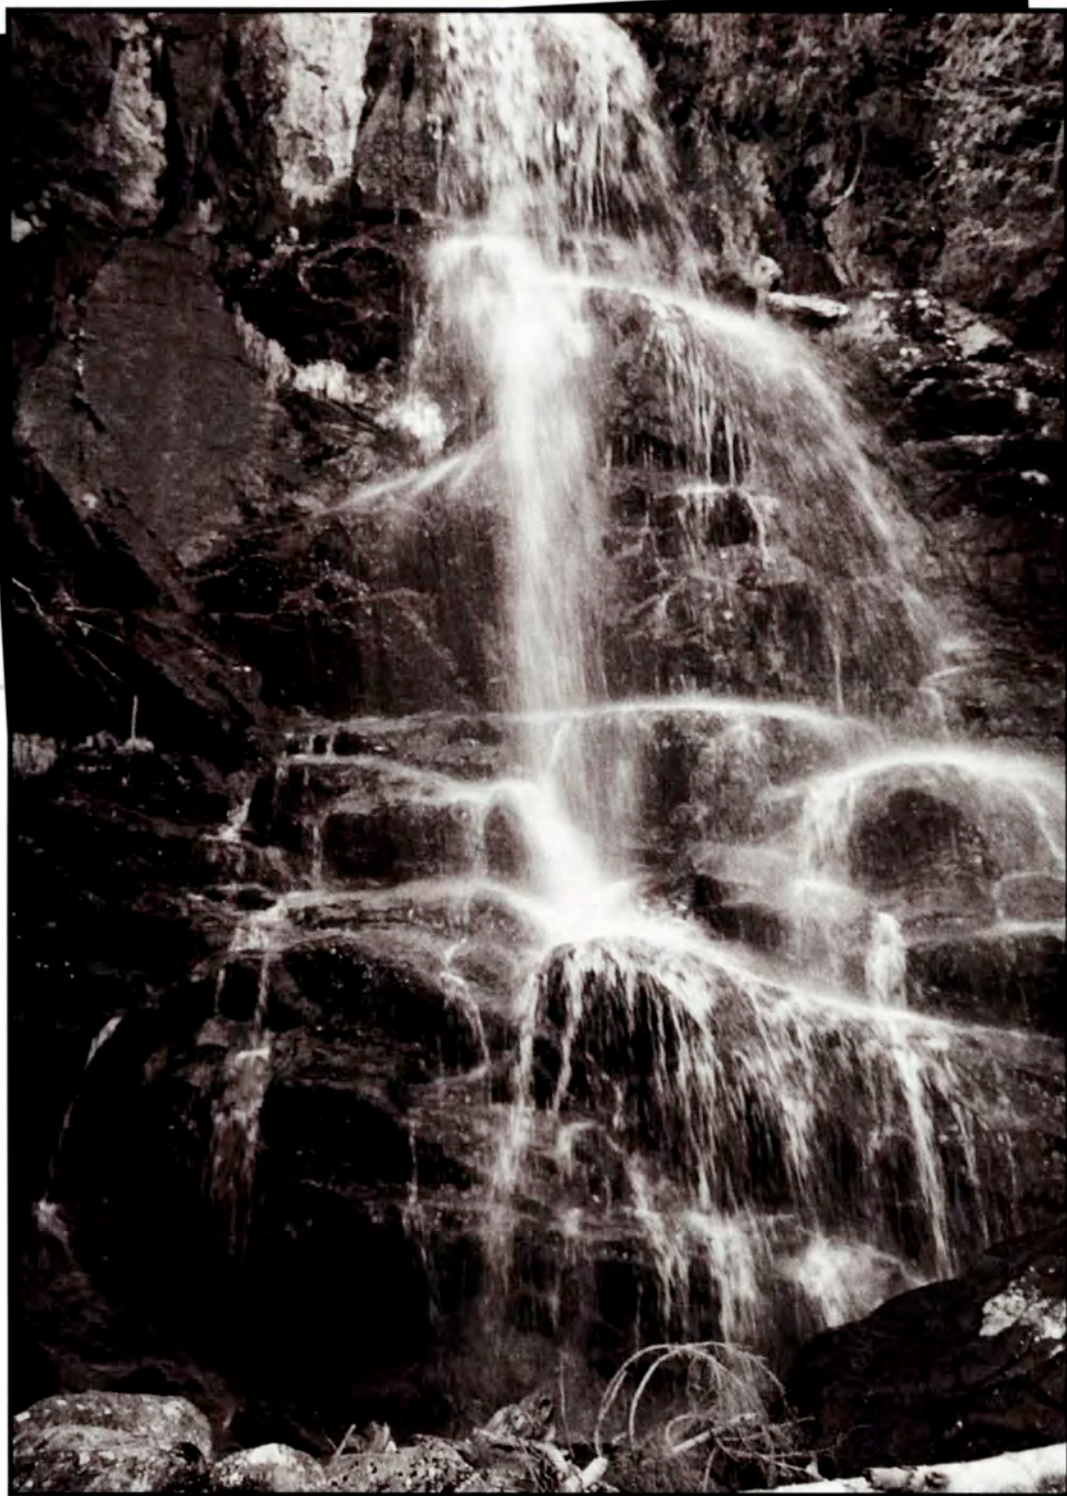

She didn't know why she brought the photo albums with her. Her memories of her youth were painful. Her father was an alcoholic that beat her brother weekly. Her mother died in childbirth delivering her brother. She'd turned to her grandmother, in those days of trouble, looking for comfort. But her grandmother ignored her and called her a "spoiled brat". Then there was the day that her grandmother pushed her down the porch stairs for calling her father a "drunk". She reached up and felt the scar on her forehead where she'd received 14 stitches from the fall. And

The man in the black suit had almost reached her car. "I can't do this," she whispered and she locked the car door. She wanted to stay in the car forever rather than have to deal with her pain. She looked out the window at the black suit coat. Her eyes wandered slowly up until they saw their equivalent in the pair of brilliant blue eyes. Her younger brother stood by the door. Tears enveloped his eyes. If he could do this than so could she. She opened the door and felt her brother's hand touch her shoulder. They walked through the parking lot and up the cement stairs. She turned and looked at the oak tree near her car. The last leaf of autumn released its tight grip on the tree and twisted and coiled in the air on its way to the ground. Bright light poured from a crystal chandelier as she entered the building. The strong scent of carnation clung to the air, a woman's high pitched wail came from an open doorway, and men in black suits came toward them. She covered ears to make the wailing stop.

Love,
art thou mad?

Thy words are sweet,
but sting my tongue with sourness.

How many times hath I been pierced by thy double-edged blade,
yet my heart it heals?

Mine eyes are coated in a crimson film obscuring what thou truly art.

A love true,
'tis but one.

Love,
thou madden I.

Whenceforth you near,
I fall away
as thy sweet wine is poured
I spilleth the cup.

Thou must be crazy,
send forth her now.

I commandeth thee now,
hither, show the face,
show true her heart,
speak thy words through her.

O sword of life,
pierce me again!

My skin is scarred
but my heart is uncut.

By God,
I command thee,
send forth my love,
send forth she,
send forth my love--

No longer wilt thou forsake me!

Winter's Broken Heart

*The sound of the wind blows through the rocky path
The broken branches of the old forrest cry out for help
The rain tears for the pain that penetrates my heart*

*He came to me a stranger from the sea
I was in the mountains enjoying the life I live
I didn't ask for his presence but he said he came to stay*

*Then one day, like a volcano, he erupted Covered my heart with ashes of sadness
Scarred me with sharp betrayal*

*The sun goes down
The air gets colder
my heart sinks
as I submit to the pain you have caused me.*

The Man in the White Coat

Charts pile the desk,
The phone - it keeps ringing.
His assistants pester him with questions.
Everyone wants a little piece.
And the phone - it keeps ringing.

A woman in the exam room
Wonders when the man in the white coat will come.
Bullets of pain shoot through her chest.
Finally, he enters and spends a few minutes by her side.
The man is too busy to see disease at war in her body.
He gives her pink pills and sends her home.

The next morning the phone rings--
Emergency room informs him
The woman died during the night.
He chokes on his coffee.
The fluorescent lights in the ceiling whirl.
Charts pile higher on the desk.
And the phone - it is still ringing.
His assistants continue their questions.
He is still in great demand.
Another woman waits in the exam room.

The man in the white coat shakes his head,
Takes off the white coat,
Places it on the pile of charts,
And walks off the battlefield.
He turns the doorknob and pushes open the door.
The door closes, the handle clicks.
The sound is an explosion that dismantles every aspect of his being.
And the phone - it keeps ringing.

HONORABLE MENTION

Khan, Just Khan

A Poem, Written Upon That Feeling That One Never Believes He or She Will Ever Feel

Explain to me,
you rushing rivers,
with your mouths gaping open
moaning blindly at me;
explain to me your song,
if your cascading voices are such.

I hear you tell me of the moon,
hovering above the earth in a neon shadow,
belching forth a halo in the sky.

What is this you say?
the moon climbs and falls,
shines, cascades, blooms, and shoots slivers.
Do not depend upon the moon
for he does not depend on us.

I am the siren of the sea
orchestrating a symphony of ebbing, flowing like the wind sweeping over barley.

By your hands,
I cannot be stopped.

I am a legion,
an atomic force,
a raging river.

Listen to me,
hear the song I sing,
hear it well.

Water, crashing against rocks, wood, splashing and floating along river rapids, in their awesome gush--
Water, wood, river rapids: singers in my song.

I will always have this symphony,
will always show this force,
will always cut away the land,
will always satisfy a thirst.

I am the river,
mighty,
unconquerable,
the very work of God.

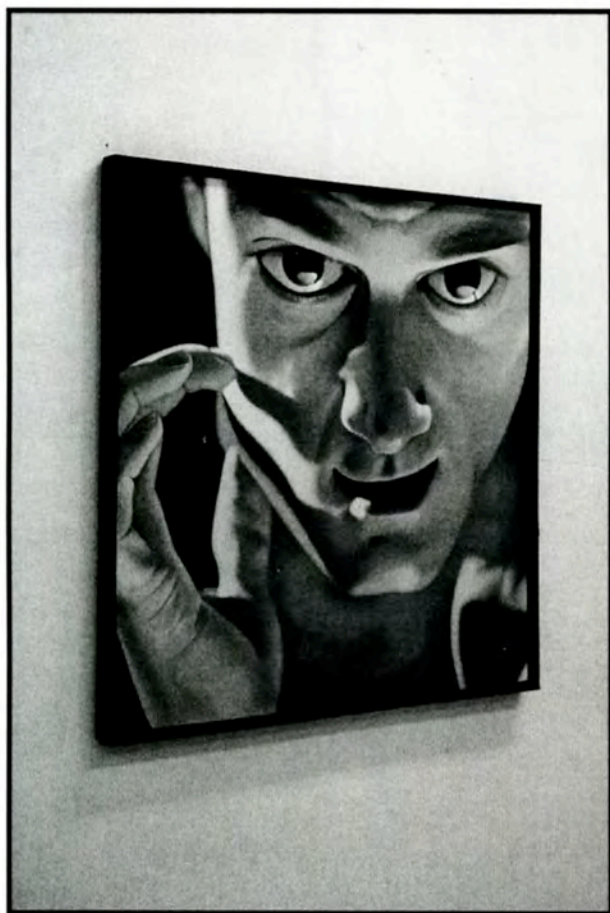

Daniel Del Ferraro

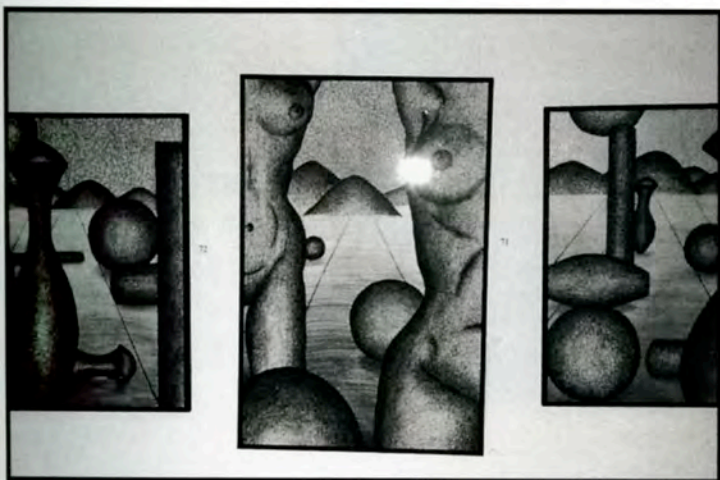

Gone

The broken glass on the floor.
 I could end my misery.
 Quick, easy, no-one would know for 6 or 7 days.
 I'm never home, who would know. No-one!
 No note. Not worth it.
 I'll teach them.
 My loved ones no longer love.
 It's only a lie, nothings different.
 No-one cares what I do.
 He no longer talks to me.
 the only one who cared no longer cares.
 If I were worth it, wouldn't I know it.
 I know more about myself than anyone else.
 It wouldn't be a possibility if God didn't accept it.
 My decision now is if I should take the easy way out or actually try at it.
 Drugs, or sharp glass.
 I don't want to be a nobody and go out like a looser.
 I'd rather risk the pain and minute of regret and cut myself.
 I even know how to do it, vertically on the wrist, not horizontally.
 People can't say I didn't try.
 I'll teach them.
 God will love me.
 Everything will be OK when I'm gone.
 No-one will even remember me.
 My fifteen minutes of fame will be when they bring the ambulance and take me out of my room, dead.
 The bright lights on me, the attention, the scandal.
 It won't last long, I know.
 I'll just be another statistic, another R.A. write up.
 Poor guy who is on duty that night.
 People will call, I hope.
 No-one knows where I am most of the time anyway.
 No-one knows I want to die.
 He'll be sorry! They'll all be sorry!
 I'll teach them.
 I want them to be guilty.
 Should've loved me more!
 I'm not ugly!
 I'm not dumb!
 I'll make them think twice about what they say! I will!
 They'll learn from me.
 I'm not useless dammit!
 They'll all be sorry, but I don't care.
 I don't need anybody.
 I'll teach them.

Sorry if we missed you.
(Yearbook is a tough business)
If so, cut your picture out and place it

A Special Dedication and Thanks to Albert R. Montanaro, Jr.

Al was advisor to the Cardinal Yearbook for more years than he probably would care to remember (at least 25 we think, because records don't go back that far).

Throughout those years he was always a stable influence and ally in the many trials and tasks faced by the editors and staffs of those books.

We thank Al for the years of dedication and support and wish him happiness in his retirement.

WOW!! We are done!

I hope. What a year it has been. There are so many people I have to thank. First is to my KICK ASS staff! Smitty, Mickey, Morgan, Kyle and Michael. You guys were awesome. There was only five of you, but I couldn't have asked for anyone else. Smitty and Morgan, your photos rocked! Kyle thanks for the help at graduation and all the fun senior stuff. Michael thanks for all of your help. Mickey, Mickey, Mickey!! I think I would have dropped out of school if it weren't for you. I can't even begin to tell you how much I appreciated everything you did. I wouldn't have wanted to spend a weekend with anybody else. Hey is your name John!?! I want chocolate! Where's my luggage, wait, where's my plane!?! That was a trip and a half!! On a serious note, the five of you were great! Just think about how many themes and ideas we went through.

I think we definitely BROKE THE MOLD with this book. I would also like to say thank you to Nancy, Nora, and

Al. Nancy thank you for dealing with the angry parents. Nora thank you so much, it's been great working with you these past three years. Al enjoy retirement, you deserve it. Last but not least, GEORGE PETRO!!! There are no words to describe you! I know I was a pain in the butt, I know I was late with all the deadlines! I am so sorry, but thank you so much for all the great ideas. This book would not be with out you. I wish you the best of luck with the new baby and retirement-well whenever that will be! Again I want to thank all of you! I learned from not only you guys, but from myself. Mickey you're gonna do awesome next year! Congrats to the Class of 1999, best of luck. To the Cios-I love all of you!

Thanks for everything-----Corey Lynne
